

I recently had bought some stock in XO Comm. This purchase was made party on XO's financial statements which indicated that they had cash through 2003. These statement turned out to be false and misleading. As a result I lost nearly all of my investment. Doesn't the SEC prohibit the issueing of misleading statements? How can I have any confidence in any corporate financials statements?

I hope that this matter can be dealt with soon.